HOT PICK

If you are on the grounds of the Bunting Institute, 34 Concord Ave., Cam., make sure to walk through the "Translucent Garden," on view through Aug. 31. Sculptor Beth Galston, a 1990-92 fellow at Radcliffe College's Bunting Institute, has created an environment composed of translucent architectural forms in perforated aluminum that responds to changes in light. The metal, colored grey, pink, peach and yellow, reflects the shadows from the trees and viewers. It is scaled to the human body with snake-like paths to travel, "bodyhouses" to go in, sculptural seats and miniature house forms. Galston says, "I think of my work as choreography; I create suggested pathways within the space for the viewer. However, I want to provoke people's imagination and sense of playfulness as they move through the space and reinvent it through their experience. I am interested in how physical space is transformed into psychological space." Funded partly by the Mass. Cultural Council. Free. Info, 495-8212.
