

MacDowell

Vol. 40, No.1 Summer 2011

New & Notable

CLEMENTS/HOWCROFT

◀ Serpentine Fence (purple chain link, stainless steel; 8' H x 15' 6" W x 126' L), a permanent sculpture located in Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, created by artist Beth Galston serves the dual purposes of beautifying an urban area and separating tennis courts from a sitting area in a Boston neighborhood park. "The sculpture alters continually throughout the day as the sun shifts and with special lighting at night," says Galston, an environmental sculptor who produces works using light and shadow, translucency, and natural materials. "My pieces create a sense of place, a moment of magic or transformation." Galston's diverse body of work includes sculptural installations and objects, large-scale public sculptures, and collaborative multimedia performances.